FIERY EMBLEM PLACED IN FRONT OF FRANK FRANCIS HOME AT TINLEY PARK LAST FRIDAY

Tinley Park residents experienced a thriller, so to say, last Friday night about 9:30 o'clock, when a large cross was lighted by the Ku Klux Klan in front of the residence of Frank Francis, one of the rural mail carriers operating out of the Tinley Park post office.

It is understood that a large number of Klansmen came from Harvey in autos and brought the cross with them. The fiery cross blazed for several hours and drew a large number of the curious townsfolk to the scene.

It is understood that Mr. Francis was a Klansman at one time, but is not one now.

Mr. Francis has made no comment on the affair. Mrs. Francis has stated, however, that Mr. Francis has a clear conscience and they have nothing to worry about.

REV. W. J. KEMNITZ, MOKENA PASTOR GOES TO NEW CHARGE

Members of the Mokena Lutheran Church gave their pastor a peaceful dismissal. An important meeting was held in the local Lutheran church, The Rev. W. J. Kemnitz had received a call to Chicago, the large field of Riverside and Dalton. The congregation there numbers about 1300 souls and great are the opportunities for growth and expansion. For two hours the members of the Mokena church debated the question, should we let our beloved pastor go? They finally agreed that he could do more for the kingdom of God in the much larger field. The congregation regrets to see their pastor go, but wishes him much success in his future work. The church here has prospered under his pastoral care. It is the hope of the congregation that they will have a young faithful pastor again in the near future. If possible a meeting will be held Sunday to put up candidates and call a new man for this difficult field. The Rev. Mr. Kemnitz will not leave immediately, but will remain in Mokena until about August 17th.

On August 10 the congregation celebrates its annual mission festival. Services in the English language Sunday July 27th. In the afternoon Rev. Kemnitz will preach in Heerscher, Ill.

JAY COADY, SON OF OF FORMER MOKENA DOCTOR, IS DEAD

Jay Coady, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Coady, formerly of Mokena, now of Minooka, died at his home Saturday night following a short illness. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at Minooka following which the body was taken to Joliet and placed in the receiving vault at the Elmhurst Cemetery.

The deceased was born in Mokena. He is survived by his deeply bereaved parents and two sisters.

MARRIED MEN TRIM SINGLE MEN IN BALL GAME WITH 7-3 SCORE

Oh boy, but the married men made the fur fly Sunday at the Schiek diamond, Mokena, when they played the single fellows. The married men showed they were full of pep and slammed the ball all over the diamond, much to the consternation of the single lads who after vainly trying to stem the heavy onslaughts of their opponents, finally went down in defeat with a score of 7 to 3. Who says the married men can't play ball? The game was a walk away for the winners and was like taking milk from a baby. Well you fellows of single blessedness, do not give up all hope, for after more practice and eating

HISTORIC NEW LENOX CAMP GROUNDS ARE SCENE OF BIG MEET

The historic camp grounds with their hallowed memories of the past at New Lenox, are again the scene of the annual encampment, which began Sunday and will continue until next Sunday night.

The spirit of the past with the progress of the present will be combined this week in the annual encampment. Instead of the old time camp meeting, the young people of the Joliet-Dixon district are holding forth on these grounds with an Epworth League Institute.

Here the young folks as well as the older ones are devoted to an outing in the natural temple, where foremost teachers of the Methodist faith will conduct classes for the young people.

Cottages on the grounds have been fitted up for the campers, who will come from all parts of the Joliet district to participate in the religious activities which have supplanted the old time camp meeting series.

The Institute is conducted by the Epworth League commission of the Joliet district. The faculty includes pastors from Joliet and other Methodist churches and instructors from Methodist schools.

Morning sessions will embrace a morning watch, Bible Study, class-service, missions, evangelism, Methodism, Junior League methods and other subjects.

There will be a period of rest in the afternoon and a daily recreational program followed by a twilight service and evening assembly and sermon.

The two Sundays which open and close the Institute will be red letter days. The Rev. T. K. Gale, district superintendent, presided at the opening services Sunday. There was a very good attendance. Rev. A. W. Hamilton, pastor of the New Lenox M. E. church, gave the principal address Sunday evening at the opening service. He portrayed in vivid word pictures the great need of the hour in cleaning up road houses, vice, etc., to protect the young folks from the path that leads to ruin.

He showed that hunger is the first law of nature. When a person is hungry and thirsty, they can as a rule relish food and drink, but when one has the best of viands and drinks before him and cannot partake of them, it's but a short time before his earthly existence is ended. As hunger and thirst is the first law of nature, so it also is the first law of spiritual life, for those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled and they are destined to an everlasting spiritual life.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton was just getting well under way with his highly interesting discourse and was heading toward a red hot climax, when a sudden thunder and wind storm broke, breaking up the meeting instantly, greatly to the disappointment of the large congregation.

Two all day sessions will mark the school of missions which will start next Sunday night. On Saturday night of this week a big camp fire gathering will be held on the grounds.

Notable speakers and Epworth League workers from all over the district will be on the program each day up to the closing services. In addition to Methodists who occupy cottages on the grounds or take up their quarters in the dormitories, many are expected to commute, attending the evening service when you may be able to show the married men that you can tie up a winning score with them in the next game.

PUBLIC SERVICE ENGINEER ON MAYOR DEVER'S RADIO COM.

Frank E. Goodnow, Electrical Engineer of the Public Service Co., of Northern Illinois, will represent the public on the Mayor's Radio Commission of Chicago. He has been appointed by Mayor Dever who selected him on recommendation of the Western Society of Engineers.

Frank E. Goodnow

Other members of the commission the announced purpose of which will be to harmonize all radio activities in Chicago and nearby territory, will represent broadcasting stations and dealers in radio equipment.

Mr. Goodnow, whose personal hobby for the last 15 years has been radio, recently returned from abroad where he combined a study of electrical development, in the interests of his company, with that of radio progress throughout the nations of Europe.

His prominence in the amateur radio field, together with his contact with the public both of Chicago and throughout the territory served by the Public Service Co., of Northern Illinois, made Mr. Goodnow the choice of the Western Society of Engineers when Mayor Dever asked the advice of that organization in making his appointment to the commission.

M. J. Cunningham, Former Mokena Teacher Injured By Fall From Cherry Tree

While M. J. Cunningham, former principal of the Mokena public school, was picking cherries Saturday from a tree in the yard of his home, 511 North Raynor Ave., Joliet, he fell a distance of 15 feet to the ground, breaking his hip and suffering other injuries.

He was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, and Dr. Arthur Fahrner was called to dress his injuries. His condition was reported favorable at latest reports. Mr. Cunningham is one of the best known veteran teachers in Will County. At present he is the principal of the Moran Street school at Joliet.

unable to attend the whole day.

Motor bus and railroad transportation are accessible. Many motorists will also go daily to the camp. On account of the main entrance being closed due to the concreting work being done on the Lincoln Highway, an entrance way has been provided thru the New Lenox school grounds.

GRACE ASBURY'S HUBBY PROMISES HER AID

If it should become necessary for Mrs. Grace Asbury, who is being held in the county jail as a witness of the slaying of Ernest Miller, Frankfort constable, to retain an attorney her husband, Henry Asbury, Elmhurst, Ill., will see that she has one, he said Monday.

Mrs. Asbury was taken into custody a week ago Saturday morning after Miller's alleged slayer had leaped from the automobile which the pair was riding in, in order to escape capture by pursuing motorcycle policemen.

The woman readily admitted witnessing the shooting when she was taken into custody and claims that Robinson, whose real name is said to be Raymond Miller, was the killer.

The two were separated for almost a year, according to the husband.

"We got along together all right for about three years," the husband said Monday, "but about a year ago we began to have our troubles. Grace is alright but she is easily led, that's all."

"I'll see that she gets a lawyer if she needs one and am willing to help her all I can."

The two were permitted to talk together for an hour, but what they talked about is something neither cared to divulge.

The husband also made arrangements for his wife to have at least one meal a day brought in from the outside.

ALEX WAGNER FARM AT ORLAND SOLD FOR $20,000 LAST FRI.

The former Alex Wagner farm located east of Orland, consisting of 70 acres, was sold last Friday for $20,000 to a realtor from Flossmoor who it is understood is expecting to make a subdivision of this farm. When this is done Orland is going to have a boom as has never been experienced before. Orland is coming to the front rapidly. The farm in question is located on two concrete roads and would make an ideal spot for building sites.

NEW LENOX CONCRETE WORK PROGRESSING FAST ON LINCOLN WAY

Concreting of the Lincoln Highway from the Joliet end toward New Lenox is progressing very rapidly. The Chicago Heights Coal Company which is in charge of the contract have a big force of men engaged on the job. They have a miniature narrow gauge railway on the side of the Lincolnway and on this they haul the concrete in tiny cars pulled by a gasoline engine. This equipment is used in place of trucks. Two big concrete mixing machines are in full operation.

On last Saturday 500 feet of concrete was laid.

The miniature railway has been laid thru the village of New Lenox up to the completed concrete road in the east end of the village and it is expected that within another week or ten days concrete will be poured in the village and the final connection will be completed.

HEAT "BLOWS UP" PIECE OF CONCRETE ON THE LINCOLN HIGHWAY

On account of the intense heat a piece of concrete "blew up" on the Lincoln Highway east of Frankfort near the Dan Hunter farm on Wednesday. While coming home from work, Henry Breidert ran in to the bugged up concrete with his auto and was nearly thrown in the ditch. The bad spot was at once barricaded and red lanterns were placed there.

NEW TINLEY PARK SCHOOL READY BY DEC.

The foundation for the new Tinley Park public school was about been completed and the work of laying the brick will start soon.

The school building committee adopted a rather unique plan of carrying on the building operations for when they found that the bids received for the construction of the new building were too high, the committee rejected all bids and then made separate contracts with the mason, bricklayers, carpenters and plumbers after getting their very lowest figures. In this way all of the men employed are responsible for their particular work to the building committee. Following are the various contracts as awarded: Concreting, Henry Stricker, Tinley Park, brick work Baumgartner & Co., Frankfort, carpenter work Mr. Koenig, Peotone and Heating and plumbing, E. Freberg, Tinley Park.

The building committee finds that by following the plan above outlined they are enabled to put up the building within the means of the bond issue and the tax which can be levied for this purpose without plunging the district into debt for years to come.

The new school is to be a two story structure of four rooms with a play room in the basement. It is being so constructed that should future needs require larger quarters an addition could be easily added so as to make it an 8 room school. The new school will be finished by December it is said.

Two Heat Prostration Cases Reported This Week

Two heat prostration cases were reported the past week. On Sunday postmaster C. Andres of Tinley Park was overcome by the heat while out motoring and was rushed home unconscious. He has recovered however and is able to be out again.

While engaged in haying Monday Louis Johnson of Mokena was also overtaken by the heat and was laid up for a day or two. He is able to be about again.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

A PRICELESS TREASURE

WITHIN your house of clay there is a rare treasure, worth more to you than all the wealth of the world. This remarkable jewel, which you have never seen, is you, yourself, hidden all the time from your most searching gaze.

Even by looking into a mirror, you can not glimpse its form or discern its beauty, though at every moment of your life you are conscious of its existence.

This wonderful gem, this spark of enduring vitality, controls your thoughts, stirs your emotions and bestows happiness or wretchedness. It leads you to destiny. In the twinkling of an eye it is capable of arousing the fondest love or the most despicable hate.

It may be generous or selfish, noble or mean, brave or cowardly, but whatever its nature, its erratic moods are beyond all human understanding, never comprehended except darkly, from one moment to another.

To know yourself is to spend a lifetime in the quest and fall at the end, yet the quest is worth making.

You may be among the world's greatest philosophers, but be as ignorant of yourself as a wooden spoon. You cannot say with certainty whether in battle you would be a coward or hero, forgive an arch enemy or destroy him, hide yourself if suddenly impoverished, or face the jeers of former associates.

Some time ago, a woman who had shot lions in the jungles of Africa, fainted before a group of smiling friends who had come to hear her lecture. Their beaming faces and shining eyes were more overpowering to her than the crouches and charges of snarling wild beasts.

Her soul was suddenly palsied, her house of clay crumbled.

You are robust and lustrous today, but tomorrow you may be weak and dull.

The dominating power within you has temporarily lost its force.

Without it you are nothing but dust, blown hither and thither by the winds.

Judgment cannot be sure, faith cannot be strong, nor life itself made to function as it should, unless the jewel you are carrying with you shall be kept as clear and bright as the stars of the firmament.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: His broad A trombones and hails the rosy dawn and dewy eye! He likes you because your A is natural and he knows his is flat and often narrow! His climbing, however, is a miracle to see!

The SANDMAN STORY

SUNFLOWER'S RIVAL

SUNFLOWER was always so intent upon watching for Mr. Sun that she did not notice anything else until he arrived, and when one morning a tall tree growing beside the wall near her said, "Miss Dawn looked very beautiful this morning, didn't she?" Miss Sunflower looked surprised.

"Who is Miss Dawn?" she asked. "I thought you saw everything," replied Tall Tree. "Miss Dawn is the beautiful creature that arrives before Mr. Sun and always waits for him. You see, Sunflower, you are not the only one who watches for him."

"This morning she was fair and blushing a beautiful rose-color when Mr. Sun peeped over the hill. I was watching them from my tip-top branch."

"You Are Not the Only One Who Watches for Him."

and he gave her a warm and bright smile, I can tell you.

"You, Miss Sunflower, will have to grow taller if you wish to catch the two, for I think she is a rival you may well fear. She is dainty and beautiful and her beauty holds one spellbound as she runs along."

Poor Sunflower could only listen with a sad heart, for well she knew she was not beautiful; but she had always supposed that she was the only one who greeted Mr. Sun and for this he loved her best always.

Tall Tree, having said enough to make Sunflower unhappy, began dancing merrily in the wind blowing over the hills, and soon forgot all he had said to poor, unhappy Sunflower.

But Sunflower thought of nothing else all day and not a wink did she sleep all night, so she might be on hand early in the morning to speak to Mr. Sun before he began his daily run.

It was rather hard for her to know just what to say to him, for though she had a sunny disposition, Sunflower was not sure he would listen kindly to chiding.

But find out, she felt she must, why Miss Dawn met Mr. Sun every morning and so when he peeped over the garden wall she said, "I am sorry I cannot get to the highest hilltop every morning to meet you, but I am not tall enough, you see."

"I am sure you must know, though, that I am always true to you, for never have I failed to watch for your coming nor does anyone watch you as you run your daily course as I do; not even Miss Dawn does that, I am sure."

Mr. Sun, being very old and very wise, began to laugh, for he knew at once what had happened. "No, my dear Miss Sunflower, no one could be as devoted as you and no one can take your place in my affections," he said.

"Wherever I am I can always see you looking at me and I could not be happy without you, and as for Miss Dawn, why, she runs away the minute I appear over the hill."

"But Tall Tree said she was very beautiful," said poor Sunflower, "and she is the first to say good morning to you."

"And you, my dear friend, are the last to say good night," replied wise Mr. Sun. "Now do not bother any more about my sister Dawn; she never stops a minute after greeting me. She is too tired out with running about to start things for the day to linger long. In fact, sometimes she is so nearly asleep that she is hardly civil."

"Your sister?" exclaimed Sunflower.

"Of course, Miss Dawn is my sister. Didn't you know that? Tall Tree knew it. I thought he told you. But I must be off to my work. Here I have lingered with you while I should have been at work; but when one has such a friend as you, my dear, it is hard to think of anything else."

Off went Mr. Sun, leaving Sunflower so happy she forgot to scold Tall Tree for making her so unhappy.

Have You This Habit?

THE OFFICIAL ATTITUDE

AT TWENTY-TWO Patty was sure only of her sense of humor. At twenty-two, Patty found herself a penniless, friendless orphan. There was only Mr. Wicks, twice her age, the expert accountant who lived in the same boarding house and pursued her with boxes of molasses chips. Patty, in spite of her impecuniosity and her loneliness, was permanently amused at Mr. Wicks in the role of suitor.

Then, in the words of the old novels, "she knew nothing more" until she found herself installed as secretary to the great Mrs. Brindle. She was attached to her seat in the outer office, and the bell on Mrs. Brindle's desk, and the telephone, and the callers. She had become official switchboard operator between Mrs. Brindle—the chairman, the director, the president, the honorary board member and commis-

Ten years passed. Patty had saved her salary and invested her savings; she had been insured in every possible way; she had become the official protégé of Mrs. Brindle.

Then who should turn up again but Mr. Wicks. At fifty-four Mr. Wicks was bald, and his hands were moist, and he was even more interested in his food, and more apt to tell the same story three times, than he had been when Patty at twenty-two had laughed at his amorous advances. At thirty-two Patty did not laugh; she tried to figure out how much time Mr. Wicks' wife would be obliged to spend in his company. Then, one day, she received a package of a vaguely familiar shape. Where before had she seen that pale brown paper and that pink string? Inside was a box of molasses chips. Like the pages of a book flipped open in a bracing breeze, the years flew back, and Patty laughed as she had not laughed in ten official seasons. And then she cried.

That spring Mrs. Brindle received Patty's resignation. Mrs. Brindle thought Patty had lost her mind and, with that official directness which was characteristic, told her so. But Patty

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE are only 13 original jokes, but every man seems to fancy that he married one of them.

Every woman knows that a man is a little bit out of his mind when he proposes marriage to her, but her vanity won't permit her to admit it, by offering him a chance to escape.

Why will a college boy waste weeks in working up an effective "line," when the little ones, "How beautiful you are!" and "I love you!" which grandfather used, are still the most thrilling in the English tongue?

Silence is the lace curtain, through which a wise woman peeps out at men, without permitting them to see her undraped thoughts or to satisfy their curiosity about mental furnishings.

When a man can't find anything around the house to improve, criticize or "sympathize," for a whole week, he begins to think that his "morale" is weakening.

An innocent young man should be perfectly sure of his heart before he gives it into a strong woman's keeping. In these days, He may never get it back again!

As long as a man can make a woman cry, he can dictate terms to her; but no sane man was ever so foolish as to argue with a smiling woman.

SCHOOL DAYS

If He Remembers

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I KNOW how men will praise him, know

How great the honors he will bear; Still but a boy, I see the glow Of many laurels he will wear.

Forevermore before his eyes Straight down his path a beacon gleams;

I know the height he will arise, If he remembers Mother's dreams.

I know how men will come to him In quest of counsel in their need; The way of life is often dim, And feet will stumble, hearts will bleed.

But he will wisely speak and well, A shepherd heart to countless herds, Yes, he eternal truth will tell, If he remembers Mother's words.

I know how other men will find In him example, seek to be As clean in heart, as pure in mind, Of equal faith and honesty.

He shall have strength when men are weak,

And consolation in his cares, Know where to turn and where to seek,

If he remembers Mother's prayers.

I know—yes, even should he fail, Should ever stumble into sin, Temptation lure him, after all, I know the height he yet will win.

One thought will save him, one that can:

He will rebuild his wasted years— One thought will make him yet a man

If he remembers Mother's tears.

Mother's Cook Book

Let us have enough strength to be sweet, enough sweetness to be strong and too much of both to be queer.

SEASONABLE DAINTIES

A VERY attractive and tasty dish which may be served for an occasion is:

Pimento Bisque.

Put through a ricer one can of pimentos (six); add two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-half teaspoonful of tabasco sauce, one-half cupful of cream and three pints of nicely-seasoned chicken stock. Let come to the boiling point and season; serve in cups.

Aspic Jelly.

This is used in so many ways that a good recipe is a great comfort. Take one quart of well-seasoned soup stock, three tablespoonfuls of gelatin, the juice of a lemon and a few grains of cayenne. Stir in the slightly-beaten egg whites and pour into mold to chill and become firm. This may be used as garnish for various dishes.

Ginger Ale Salad.

Soften one-fourth of a package of gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of water. Let stand over hot water to dissolve. Add a grating of lemon rind, one and three-fourths cupfuls of ginger ale. Turn into molds to chill and set. Serve very cold on heart leaves of lettuce with a highly-seasoned mayonnaise dressing, to which three tablespoonfuls of cocktail dressing has been added.

Tomatoes Stuffed With Beans.

Cut a slice from the top of four tomatoes, remove the pulp and invert to drain. To one and one-half cupfuls of good baked beans add one onion, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley—the onion should be either grated or chopped—one-half cupful of nuts, two tablespoonfuls of celery, chopped, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix all together and add a bit of French dressing or mayonnaise to moisten; fill the tomatoes and put a small spoonful of salad dressing on top of each filled tomato.

Green peppers filled with baked beans moistened with catsup or cream, if liked, and baked until tender, make a very tasty luncheon dish.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ELSIE

FROM a casual survey it seems almost incredible that Elsie and Adelaide should be practically the same name. Yet such is the case since Elsie is the last and most contracted English form of popular Adelaide.

Signifying "noble cheer," Elsie has its source in the old Teutonic prefix "Aethel" or "Adel," meaning noble. Adalheit was one of the first feminine names formed from it, and was much in use among the daughters in Frankland. Adelheid, another form, named many of the feudal princesses of the Tenth and Eleventh centuries. Adelaide is the French and English version.

Elsie is the seventh step in the succession of the English favorite. It is reached through Adeline, Adeliza, Adela, Alice, Alicia. No other country has ever used it, except Germany, which has an old form, Else, very popular among the peasants.

In this country, however, Elsie is a distinct name, free of all previous association with Adelaide or its other immediate predecessors.

Malachite is Elsie's lucky stone. It is an Egyptian gem which, to be lucky, should be engraved with an image of the sun. For Elsie, it promises peace and protection from all evil. It is likewise a cure for insomnia, and according to an old superstition, is particularly lucky for children, giving them sound sleep and immunity from disease, if attached to their cradles. Tuesday is Elsie's lucky day and 6 is her lucky number.

If it be dull from out your stores

Biblical "Neck Verse"

The first verse of the Fifty-first Psalm was given the name "Neck Verse." At one time any person in holy orders could claim exemption from punishment for certain crimes. This "benefit of clergy" was afterward extended to all who could read, the Bible being handed the culprit for a test. If he could read a verse from the Psalms—particularly Psalms 51:1, his penalty was light; that is, he "saved his neck."

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Shenandoah to Have Greatest Air Radio

WASHINGTON — The most powerful radio transmitting station ever taken aloft will be on board the navy dirigible Shenandoah when she joins the Atlantic fleet to co-operate in war maneuvers and later crosses the continent for similar work with the Pacific fleet. According to officers, the set will have a greater range than the wireless of any of the world's great passenger ships.

The set is now being completed in the radio division of the naval experimental and research laboratory in Bellevue, near here. To make room for it the engine was removed from the control car of the Shenandoah during repairs made necessary by her runaway flight, and an entirely new section designed to replace the old motor cabin.

An effective sending range of 1,000 miles was the minimum requirement set for the navy's radio engineers when they were told to build the new wireless plant. That was the least they were to do. What they have done, according to the giant airship's officers, is to turn out a set that under the most favorable transmitting conditions will have an ether reach of between 4,000 and 5,000 miles.

Compared with the 400 or 500 mile range of the dirigible's present set, these figures are impressive. Long-distance sending will be taken care of by means of a tube transmitter, operating on a wave-length range of 500 to 1,500 meters. For shorter ranges the new wireless equipment includes an auxiliary transmitter with a minimum range of 500 miles. This transmitter operates on comparatively low power by resorting to high frequencies. It works at 3,000 kilocycles on a 100-meter wave length.

A six-kilowatt generator, driven by a special gasoline motor, supplies alternating current for the main transmitter and direct current to replenish the plant's storage batteries and to light the ship. The batteries also furnish "juice" for starting the generator motor. In case this breaks down in flight the batteries have sufficient reserve power to operate the auxiliary transmitting set for some time in addition to keeping necessary lights burning.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the Shenandoah's new equipment is her radio compass. So far as is known it is the first radio compass to be installed on a lighter-than-air ship and is said to be without counterpart in all the radio world. It operates over a wider band of wave lengths than any similar instrument ever built.

Urge Education for "Back-to-Nature"

EDUCATIONAL forces throughout the country have been called upon to enlist in the out-of-door program mapped out at the sessions of the Out Door Recreation conference called by President Coolidge. This was brought out by the resolutions submitted by the committees appointed by Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, who presided at the Washington sessions.

With the appointment of an executive committee the organization became a permanent body. The membership of this committee is:

Chauncey J. Hamlin, New York, chairman.

Dr. John C. Merriam, California, vice chairman.

Dr. George E. Scott, Illinois, treasurer and chairman finance committee.

Dr. Vernon Kellogg, California, secretary.

Walter F. Martin, Washington, D. C.

John Barton Payne, Illinois.

Mrs. Jane Deeter Ripplin, New York.

Charles Sheldon, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, Colorado, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

George Shiras III, Michigan.

James E. West, New York.

The American Nature association of Washington is leading in this campaign, and in co-operation with Mrs. John D. Sherman, the newly elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the association is carrying on a campaign of education to this end. Mrs. Anna Botsford Comstock, the leader in nature study instruction in the United States, directs the nature study lessons for the association.

In commenting on the work of the conference, Charles L. Pack, who is chairman of the committee on state parks and forests, says:

"The call of President Coolidge came at an opportune time. As never before, millions are now getting into the out of doors and closer to nature. These millions must be educated, not alone to the wonders of nature, but as to the direct bearing nature has upon their daily lives. Extreme need of education to halt the destruction of nature's wonders is shown by the estimates that predict three million automobiles will be sold in 1924 and only twelve million books. That means only one book to every twelfth family. It also means that thousands of newcomers will take to the road.

The committee on formulation of an educational program for outdoor recreation pointed out the need of a campaign to make known and advertise to the American public those facilities in the nature of parks, forests, rivers, lakes and playgrounds which are available or may be made available in the future.

Slight Decrease Is Noted in Employment

DECREASES of 5.2 per cent in employment and of 2 per cent in the pay roll totals for this year were found by making a comparison of employment reports compiled by the United States Department of Labor from a survey of 5,772 establishments in 46 industries taken in April, 1923, and the same month this year.

The statistical reports cover 2,045,195 employees in April, 1924, and show their earnings amounted to $54,934,432, while in April of last year there were 2,158,055, whose earnings amounted to $56,043,735. Gains in employment were reported in only 13 of the 46 industries. Gains in the earnings of employees were reported in 20 industries.

"The iron and steel industry gained 8.7 per cent in the number of employees and 17.5 per cent in earnings," the departmental report states. "Among industries which gained both in numbers of employees and pay roll totals were the cement, sugar refining, electrical goods, automobiles, book and job and newspaper printing, and sawmills and millwork. These increases, however, are considerably smaller than those in the steel industry.

Referring to the wages and hours in the iron and steel industry, the federal review states:

"While the eight-hour turn has been adopted as the standard working time for all employees in some entire plants and in certain department divisions in other plants, the twelve-hour shift still prevails to a large extent. Some employees also work seven days a week.

"Earnings of these employees per hour have increased 15 per cent in 1924, as compared with 1922, although they are still 26 per cent below the peak of high-wage rates of 1920. As compared with 1913, an increase of 70 per cent is noted in the 1924 figure, while earnings per hour have doubled since 1910.

"In the United States the total number of children from ten to fifteen years of age reported as engaged in gainful occupations in 1920 was 1,060,858, representing 8.5 per cent of all children in that age period, as compared with 1,990,225 or 18.4 per cent in 1910; 1,750,000 or 18.2 per cent in 1901; 1,503,771 or 18.1 per cent in 1890.

"This increase was general throughout the country and was more marked for boys than for girls. Only six states showed an increase in the number of children gainfully employed."

U. S. Pours $75,000,000 Into Road Funds

THE agricultural appropriation bill signed recently by the President provides federal aid for the fiscal year 1925, which began July 1. The bill authorizes the secretary of agriculture to apportion to the states immediately the $75,000,000 authorized by the post office appropriation act of June 19, 1922, and appropriates $13,000,000 to be immediately available, the remainder to be made available in later appropriations.

The apportionment is made to the states on the same basis as for preceding years, except Hawaii is for the first time admitted to a share, which is on the same basis as for the states. This has been provided for in an act of the present session of congress. Illinois receives $3,203,867.99 of the fund. Since 1916 a total of $540,000,000 has been made available by previous acts of congress, and the bureau of public roads, which administers these funds, reports the status on May 31 as follows: Completed, 32,099 miles; under construction, 17,000 miles; approved for construction, 2,515 miles, and $33,106,126 available for new projects.

Practically all of the old funds and the entire amount of the new funds have been or will be expended on the federal aid highway system of the United States. This system, provided for by the federal highway act of 1921, consists of approximately 170,000 miles of roads, and has been designated by the states and approved by the federal government.

At the beginning of 1924 it was estimated that 60,000 miles of the system had been surfaced, about 8,700 miles graded, leaving 110,000 miles to be surfaced. Some of this work had been done by the states independent of federal aid. To surface the remaining 110,000 miles by 1934 will require an annual program of 11,000 miles.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Dr. Frederick R. Green,
Editor of "Health."

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

OVERWEIGHT

WHAT would you think of a man who carried day and night, wherever he went, a 50-pound burden on his back? You'd say he was crazy and you'd probably be right. It's all well enough for Christian in "Pilgrim's Progress" or for fanatics in India or China, but no common-sense American would do such a foolish thing.

Hold on, thought!

How about that 50 pounds of surplus fat you're carrying? Is that any more sensible?

What's the difference, whether the burden is on your back or under your skin? It's an unnecessary burden just the same.

You wouldn't bet on a fat prizefighter, or put your money on a fat race horse, would you? You'd know they weren't "in condition" and that if you backed them you'd lose.

If you carry surplus and unnecessary weight, you're going to lose.

The paunch around your waist isn't all. For every pound of fat you have on your stomach there's another pound inside. Fat in your muscles, fat around your lungs and heart and fat around your blood vessels. And it's all unnecessary weight to carry and needless fat that clogs and impedes your muscles.

Life insurance companies will not issue a policy to anyone who is 40 per cent overweight. They know that fat people are more subject to diabetes, kidney diseases, heart diseases and hardened blood vessels than are people of normal weight.

Life insurance companies are run to make money and they don't place any bets on men who are not "in condition."

Why are you too fat?

In 75 per cent of cases because you eat too much or use your muscles too little, or both.

You put food in your stomach and the body digests it and makes fuel out of it. But it has more than it needs, so the surplus is stored up under your skin and between your muscles and around your heart to get it out of the way.

It's waste that makes waist.

Fat means that you are buying more food than you need; eating more food than you need; carrying more weight than you need, and clogging up your body machinery.

In current business language, it's too much overhead, though it isn't overhead at all.

What's the remedy?

Eat less, work more. That's the only antifat prescription that's worth taking. Save money, save energy and gain better health by having a better physical machine to work with.

SAFE MILK IS CLEAN

MILK is Nature's first food.

As long as milk is sweet and rich and tastes good, most of us are satisfied. We seldom ask where it comes from or whether, in its journey from the cow to the consumer, it has been handled in a clean and careful manner. Yet milk is a food in which disease germs grow easily and rapidly.

In the old days, milk from any cow was considered fit to use and any old kind of a milk bucket was good enough.

Our milk supply today is far better than it used to be, but there is still room for improvement.

The standards established by local health departments and the efforts of the large dairy companies to improve their product have been largely responsible for this movement. As a result, the milk supply in our large cities is better than in the country districts.

Every mother should know what are the necessary factors in pure milk and should insist on getting a milk that is, at least, harmless.

The principal diseases caused by impure milk are typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, septic sore throat, and probably scarlet fever.

As cattle are especially susceptible to tuberculosis, all cows furnishing milk for sale should be tuberculin tested.

The principal danger from typhoid fever is the use of polluted water in washing milk cans, bottles, dippers, and other utensils.

No one who has a sore throat or any contagious disease should be allowed to milk cows or to handle milk for sale.

As it is practically impossible to protect milk produced over any large area from contamination, all milk should be pasteurized before it is sold. This requires heating the milk to a temperature of 154 degrees Fahrenheit for thirty minutes and then cooling it to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. This process destroys any disease germs which may be in the milk. Pasteurized milk should be immediately put into clean bottles and sealed before delivery.

As milk is an indispensable food for children and is one of our most valuable foods for persons of any age, its purity should be beyond question.

Pure milk costs a little more but the additional cost is well worth while.

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark of 415 Walsworth avenue, Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Little Dorothy had dislocated her wrist and suffered greatly before the physician could be summoned. After he had attended to it, she said: "Suppose I had died before you came, would I have been a crippled angel?"

"Oh, no," replied the doctor, "you would have been doctored in heaven."

"Why," queried Dorothy, "do doctors go to heaven, too?"

Love's Labor Lost

A number of people assembled to look at a turtle. There was a child in the party who proceeded to stroke the shell.

"Why are you doing that, my dear?" asked a man.

"Oh, to please the turtle."

"Why, you might as well stroke the steeple of the church to please the minister," said the man.

Mill Ends--what are they?

Manufacturers and weavers of yard fabrics and knit goods comply to certain regulations in yardage style and size of their products for export trade. All yard goods falling short of specified yardage or having slight imperfections in weaving, or hosiery, underwear, etc., that have slight flaws caused by irregular thread are laid aside and become known as "Mill Ends." They are identical in quality, style and design with the full piece or garment, but slight imperfection prevents the manufacturer from selling them at a regular profit. These slight imperfections in many cases would take an expert to discover them, and do not impair the service, style or quality of garment in any way. By contracting months ahead and taking over entire accumulations of mill or factory, we are able to make these startling prices on seasonable goods.

Why An Editorial Page?

Given an editor with the capacity for straight thinking and fearless writing, the editorial page is one of the most valuable assets of a local newspaper. If the editor be narrow-minded, prejudiced or spineless, he had better not write editorials at all.

By fearless writing is not meant the attacking of individuals or institutions for the sake of gaining notoriety or playing the gallery. It requires no courage to condemn that which is unpopular or defenseless.

True fearlessness on the part of a small-town editor consists rather in voicing his honest opinions on matters affecting his community, whether they coincide with the prevailing public sentiment or not.

If you want your editorial page to be read, you must put something into it which will make your readers think. If you do not, they will soon quit reading it altogether. A poor excuse may be better than opportunity for community service.

none, but a weak, colorless editorial page is worse than none.

It is easy, however, to go to the other extreme. Some editors appear to think it necessary to "jump on" something or somebody in every issue, with or without provocation.
Soon no one pays any attention to their ravings and when a real issue arises they find themselves without influence.

To make a real editorial page
you must, first, know your facts;
second, reach reasonable conclusions therefrom, and third, state your conclusions with absolute honesty and fearlessness, regardless of who may or may not agree with them.

Such a page will command respect, which is more important than temporary popularity. If you can conduct such a page and are not doing it, you are overlooking the most important part of your job and neglecting your greatest poor excuse may be better than opportunity for community service.

GUILT PLEA BY FRANKS' SLAYERS

Leopold and Loeb Ask for Mercy; Fate in Hands of Chicago Judge.

Chicago.—Casting from them all hope of freedom as easily as they killed for a thrill, Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. Loeb risked their lives on the outcome of their last great experiment with human nature. Today they stand no farther from the gallows. The door behind them is closed.

Chief Justice John R. Caverly of the Criminal court is the subject of the final dramatic experiment of their lives. Their pleas of "guilty" have placed their lives in his hands.

Clarence S. Darrow, chief of counsel for the defense, formally pleaded his two clients guilty. Called to the bar, both youths said they realized what that plea meant.

And it means that the trial must have one of these results:

A sentence of death.

A sentence of life imprisonment in Joliet.

A sentence of imprisonment of not less than 14 years and not more than 75.

Alienists will take the stand for the defense. They will testify as to the mental condition and degree of responsibility of the college honor men.

But the defense is not insanity. It will consist of evidence intended to mitigate the crime by showing:

1. That the murderers were not entirely responsible.

2. That their youth should be taken into consideration, as one reason why they should be kept from the gallows.

If the sentence is to Joliet, it is possible that later they might be adjudged insane while in prison. In that event they would be transferred to the Chester Asylum for Criminal Insane and upon recovering would be returned to Joliet to serve out their sentences.

Soviet Divorces Granted in Five Minutes for $1.50

Moscow.—Soviet Russia offers far more advantages to persons seeking easy and quick divorces than perhaps any place in the world. Under a new decree a divorce can be had within five minutes at a cost of $1.50, provided both parties agree. If, however, one objects, the case must be referred to the courts. Misconduct does not constitute a valid reason for the annulment of marital ties, but desertion, religious superstition, excessive religious piety, incompatibility of temperament and divergence in political views are held to be sufficient causes.

Hughes Gives Pledge of Aid to Europeans

London.—Europe can count on the United States (1) in efforts toward further disarmament, (2) in support of institutions of international justice, (3) in co-operation for the promotion of peace in conformity with the program of national institutions for the promotion of public health and war on the drug traffic, and (4) assistance in rehabilitation through the Dawes plan. Minn. June, Wis.—"I was under treatment, but nothing seemed to help me, and I was run-down and so weak that I had to remain in bed much of the time and was like an invalid. I had pains in my abdomen and in the female organs, and my stomach bothered me. My husband saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, thought it must be good, and brought it home to me and advised me to try it. After taking one bottle I was able to eat, and after six bottles I was doing my own work, which I hadn't been able to do for years. I have a new baby who is doing nicely, and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and feeling better than I have for four years. In the Days of Poor Richard by IRVING BACHELLER

"There is no morning to their day," he went on. "Their dawn is noontime. Our kind of people have had longer days and have used them wisely. So we have pushed on ahead of this European caravan. Our fathers in New England made a great discovery."

"What was it?" I asked.

"That righteousness was not a joke; that Christianity was not a solemn plaything for one day in the week, but a real, practical, working proposition for every day in the year; that the main support of the structure is industry; that its most vital commandment is this, 'six days shalt thou labor'; that no amount of wealth can excuse a man from this duty. Everyone worked. There was no idleness and therefore little poverty. The days were all for labor and the nights for rest. The wheels of progress were greased and moving."

"And our love of learning helped to push them along," I suggested.

"True. Our people have been mostly like you and me," he went on. "We long for knowledge of the truth. We build schools and libraries and colleges. We have pushed on out of the Eighteenth century into a new time. There you were born. Now you have stepped a hundred years backward into Europe. You are astonished, and this brings me to my point. Here I am with a great task on my hands. It is to enlist the sympathy and help of France. I must take things, not as I could wish them to be, but as I find them. At this court women are all powerful. It has long been a maxim here that a diplomatist must stand well with the ladies. Even though he is venerable, he must be gallant, and I do not use the word in a shady sense. The ladies are not so bad as you would think them. They are playthings. To them, life is not as we know it, filled with realities. It is a beautiful drama of rich costumes and painted scenes and ingenious words, all set in the atmosphere of romance. The players only pretend to believe each other. In the salon I am one of these players. I have to be."

"Mirabeau seemed to mean what he said," was my answer.

"Yes. He is one of those who often speak from the heart. All these players love the note of sincerity when they hear it. In the salon it is out of key, but away from the ladies the men are often living and not playing. Mirabeau, Condorcet, Turgot and others have heard the call of Human Liberty. Often they come to this house and speak out with a strong candor."

"I suppose that this great drama of despotism in France will end in a tragedy whose climax will consume the stage and half the players," I ventured to say.

"That is a theme, Jack, on which you and I must be silent," Franklin answered. "We must hold our mouths as with a bridle."

"For a moment he sat looking sadly into the glowing coals on the grate. Franklin loved to talk, but no one could better keep his own counsel."

"At heart I am no revolutionist," he said presently. "I believe in purifying—not in breaking down. I would to God that I could have convinced the British of their error. Mainly I am with the prophet who says:

"Stand in the old ways. View the ancient paths. Consider them well and be not among those who are given to change."

"I sat for a moment thinking of the cruelties I had witnessed, and asking myself if it had been really worth while. Franklin interrupted my thoughts."

"I wish we could discover a plan which would induce and compel nations to settle their differences without cutting each other's throats. When will human wisdom be sufficient to see the advantage of this?"

"He told me the thrilling details of his success in France; how he had won the kingdom for an ally and secured loans and the help of a fleet and army then on the sea."

"And you will not be surprised to learn that the British have been sounding me to see if we would be base enough to abandon our ally," he laughed.

"In a moment he added:

"Come, it is late and you must write a letter to the heart of England before you lie down to rest."

"Often thereafter he spoke of Margaret as 'the heart of England.'"

CHAPTER XXIV

The Pageant

Jack began to assist Franklin in his correspondence and in the many business details connected with his mission.

"I have never seen a man with a like capacity for work," the young officer writes. "Every day he is conferring with Vergennes or other representatives of the king, or with the ministers of Spain, Holland and Great Britain. The greatest intellect in the kingdom is naturally in great request. Today, after many hours of negotiation with the Spanish minister, in came M. Dubourg, the most distinguished physician in Europe."

"Mon chere maitre," he said "I have a most difficult case and as you know more about the human body than any man of my acquaintance I wish to confer with you."

"Yesterday, Doctor Ingenhauz, physician to the emperor of Austria, came to consult him regarding the vaccination of the royal family of France."

"In the evening, M. Robespierre, a slim, dark-skinned, studious young attorney from Arras, wearing gold-rimmed spectacles, came for information regarding lightning rods, he having doubts of their legality. While they were talking, M. Joseph Ignace Guillotin, another physician, arrived. He was looking for advice regarding a proposed new method of capital punishment, and wished to know if, in the Doctor's opinion, a painless death could be produced by quickly severing the head from the body. Next morning, M. Jourdan, with hair and beard as red as the flank of my bay mare and a loud voice, came soon after breakfast, to sell us mules by the shipload."

"So you see that even I, living in his home and seeing him almost every hour of the day, have little chance to talk with him. Last night we met M. Voltaire—dramatist and historian—now in the evening of his days. We were at the academy, where we had gone to hear an essay by D'Alembert. Franklin and Voltaire—a very thin old gentleman of eighty-four, with piercing black eyes—sat side by side on the platform. The audience demanded that the two great men should come forward and salute each other. They arose and advanced and shook hands."

"A la Française," the crowd demanded.

"So the two white-haired men embraced and kissed each other amidst loud applause."

"As we were leaving the table one day he said: 'Jack, I have an idea worthy of Demosthenes. My friend, David Hartley of London, who still has hopes of peace by negotiation, wishes to come over and confer with me. I shall tell him that he may come if he will bring with him the Lady Hare and her daughter.'

"More thrilling words were never spoken by Demosthenes," I answered. "But how about Jones and his Bonne Homme Richard? He is now a terror to the British coasts. They would fear destruction."

"I shall ask Jones to let them alone," he said. "They can come under a special flag."

"Commodore Jones did not appear again in Paris until October, when he came to Passy to report upon a famous battle."

"I was eager to meet this terror of the coasts. His impudent courage and sheer audacity had astonished the world. The wonder was that men were willing to join him in such daredevil enterprises."

"I had imagined that Jones would be a tall, gaunt, swarthy, raw-boned, sweating man of the sea. He was a sleek, silent, modest little man, with delicate hands and features. He wished to be alone with the Doctor, and so I did not hear their talk. I know that he needed money and that Franklin, having no funds, provided the sea fighter from his own purse."

"One evening our near neighbors, Le Comte de Chaumont and M. LeVilledard, came to announce that a dinner and ball in honor of Franklin would occur at the palace of Comte de Chaumont less than a week later."

"My good friends," said the philosopher, "I value these honors which are so graciously offered me, but I am old and have much work to do. I need rest more than I need the honors."

"It is one of the penalties of being a great savant that people wish to see and know him," said the count. "The most distinguished people in France will be among those who do you honor. I think, if you can recall a talk we had some weeks ago, you will wish to be present."

"Oh, then, you have heard from the Hornet."

"I have a letter here which you may read at your convenience."

"My dear friend, be pleased to receive my apologies and my hearty thanks," said Franklin. "Not even the gout could keep me away."

"Next day I received a formal invitation to the dinner and ball. I told the Doctor that in view of the work to be done, I would decline the invitation. He begged me not to do it and insisted that he was counting upon me to represent the valor and chivalry of the New World; that as I had grown into the exact stature of Washington and was so familiar with his manners and able to imitate them in conversation, he wished me to assume the costume of our commander in chief. He did me the honor to say:

"There is no other man whom it would be safe to trust in such an exalted role. I wish, as a favor to me, you would see what can be done at the costume's and let me have a look at you."

"I did as he wished. The result was an astonishing likeness. I dressed as I had seen the great man in the field. I wore a wig slightly tinged with gray, a blue coat, buff waistcoat and sash and sword and the top boots and spurs. When I strode across the room in the masterly fashion of our great commander, the Doctor clapped his hands."

"You are as like him as one pea is like another!" he exclaimed. "Nothing would so please our good friends, the French, who have an immense curiosity regarding Le Grand Vasanton, and it will give me an opportunity to instruct them as to our spirit."

"He went to his desk and took from a drawer a cross of jeweled gold on a long necklace of silver—a gift from the king—and put it over my head so that the cross shone upon my breast."

"That is for the faith of our people," he declared. "The guests will assemble on the grounds of the count late in the afternoon. You will ride among them on a white horse. A beautiful maiden in a white robe held at the waist with a golden girdle will receive you. She will be Human Liberty. You will dismount and kneel and kiss her hand. Then the prime minister of France will give to each a blessing and to you a sword and a purse. You will hold them up and say:

"For these things I promise you the friendship of my people and their prosperity."

"You will kiss the sword and hang it beside your own and pass the purse to me and then I shall have something to say."

"So it was all done, but with thrilling details, of which no suspicion had come to me. I had not dreamed, for instance, that the king and queen would be present and that the enthusiasm would be so great. You will be able to judge of my surprise when, riding my white horse through the cheering crowd, throwing flowers in my way, I came suddenly upon Margaret Hare in the white robe of Human Liberty. Now facing me after these years of trial, her spirit was equal to her part. She was like unto the angel I had seen in my dreams. The noble look of her face thrilled me. It was not so easy to maintain the calm dignity of Washington in that moment. I wanted to lift her in my arms and hold her there, as you may well believe, but, alas, I was Washington! I dismounted and fell upon one knee before her and kissed her hand not so fervently, I would have you know, in spite of my temptation. She stood erect, although tears were streaming down her cheeks and her dear hand trembled when it rested on my brow and she could only whisper the words:

"May the God of your fathers aid and keep you."

"The undercurrent of restrained emotion in this little scene went out to that crowd, which represented the wealth, beauty and chivalry of France. I suppose that some of them thought it a bit of good acting."

"But we were to find in this little drama a climax wholly unexpected by either of us and of an importance to our country which I try in vain to estimate. When the prime minister handed the purse to Franklin he bade him open it. This the latter did, finding therein letters of credit for three million livres granted, of which we were in sore need. With it was the news that a ship would be leaving Boulogne in the morning and that relays on the way had been provided for his messenger. The invention of our beloved diplomat was equal to the demand of the moment and so he announced:

"Washington is like his people. He turns from all the loves of this world to obey the call of duty. My young friend who has so well presented the look and manner of Washington will now show you his spirit."

"He looked at his watch and added: 'Within forty minutes he will be riding post to Boulogne, there to take ship for America.'"

Indians of Amazon Valley

War is the normal state of the Jibaro Indian of the Amazon valley, first, for the purpose of getting wives from neighboring or enemy tribes, second, for revenge of injuries inflicted upon relatives during wars, then for enemy heads that are supposed to bring good luck to the possessors because of the sacrifice of the victim to the devil. The heads of their enemies also become a source of income to these savage Amazonian tribes, since they are exchanged with traders for arms, ammunition, etc.

The skull is removed from the head of the decapitated enemy through a slit in the back from the neck up. The skin is then boiled to arrest putrefaction, after which it is dried and reduced in size by inserting hot stones the size of an orange. When the interior has been shrunk to the size of the stones hot sand is used to continue the process of drying and shrinking. After the process is completed, the head is hung up in the hut as a trophy and feasts are held in its honor. These miniature heads, retaining a remarkable degree characteristic likeness to the living person, are in demand in the outside world.—Detroit News.

Stern realities of life confront the man at the tail end of the procession.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 4:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—"For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succour them that are tempted."—Heb. 2:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Refuses to Do Wrong.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Conquers the Tempter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows Us How to Overcome Temptation.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Victory Over the Tempter.

I. Its Purpose (v. 1).

The Holy Spirit led Him into the wilderness with the specific purpose that He there meet and overcome the one whose works He came to destroy (Heb. 2:14). His temptation was not a preparation for His work, as usually thought, but rather the opening of the dreadful conflict between Christ and Satan, which was to issue in Satan's defeat. It was not to test Jesus to find out as to whether He would stand fast—to see whether He would sin. The eternal purpose of God as to redemption absolutely could not fail. It was rather to exhibit Him as an object upon which faith might rest, to show that a union between God and man had been effected which would insure man's reconciliation.

II. The Conflict (vv. 2-11).

1. The Combatants (v. 1).

(1) Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ, the Divine Man, is now entering upon His mediatorial work. He went immediately from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God to meet the arch-enemy of the race.

(2) The Devil. He was a real person and, while always filled with cunning and malice, in this case the initiative was taken by the Lord. He was dragged into the presence of Jesus Christ and forced into the struggle.

2. The Battle Ground (v. 1). It was in the wilderness of Judea. The first man was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings and failed. The second man was tempted in a barren wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts, and gloriously triumphed.

3. The Method of Attack (vv. 2-10). Since as our Redeemer Christ sustained a threefold relationship, the Son of Man, Son of God and as Messiah, each one was made a ground of attack.

(1) As Son of Man (vv. 2, 3). This was a test of the reality of His humanity. To demonstrate whether the humanity which He obtained through the virgin birth was real, the appeal was made to the instinct of hunger. Hunger is not the result of sin. While the appetite is not sinful, to have satisfied it in a wrong way would have been sin.

(2) Son of God (vv. 5, 6). This was a test as to whether the personality which had come from heaven and taken upon itself humanity was divine. The Devil quoted from a Messianic psalm to get Him to presume upon God's care. God does care for His own, but to neglect common precaution—to do the uncalled for thing—just to put God's promise to a test is sin and death. Satan tempts men to day to do the spectacular things in order to get publicity, to gain the ears of the people.

(3) As Messiah (vv. 8, 9). Christ's mission as the Messiah was to recover this world from the Devil. The Devil offered to surrender to Him on the simple condition that He would adopt his method, thus obviating the necessity of the cross. The kingdoms were really Christ's and He knew that they would ultimately become His. The inducement was to get immediate possession without the sufferings of the cross.

4. The Defense (vv. 4, 7, 10). Christ met the enemy each time and repulsed his attack with the Word of God. Each time He said, "It is written" and quoted from Deuteronomy, the book which the higher critics would discredit. Christ had enough confidence in it to use it in this, the most crucial hour of the world's history.

5. The Issue (v. 11).

(1) Satan vanquished. The enemy was completely routed. The strong man was so bound that the spoiling of his house was possible.

(2) Angels came and ministered unto Him. This event was so notable that these glorious beings were sent from heaven to give it recognition and to minister unto the triumphant King.

Man's Sorrows

Man's sorrows are a mystery, but that sinners should not have sorrows were a sadder mystery still. And God pleads with us all not to lose the good of our experiences of the bitterness of sin by our levity or our blindness to their meanings.—Alexander MacLaren.

A Prayer

We pray Thee, O God, that Thou wilt help us to be faithful, earnest and true in all of our work, whatever it may be.

Clear Conscience

Lots of people regard a clear conscience as more of a luxury than a necessity.

Considering Others

It is always easier to discuss the duties of others, than to do our own.

Mormon "Boweries"

The first meeting places of the Mormons in Salt Lake City were called "boweries" and the "Old Boweries" was erected, 1847, on the site of the present temple. It was built of poles and brush 160 by 60 feet. Posts were set and a skeleton frame lashed with rawhide thongs and wooden pegs. Upon this structure willows, sagebrush, evergreens and other shrubs were piled. This served until 1852.

Behind

"Howdy, Cap!" saluted an acquaintance. "How's all the folks?" "Well I'll just—tell you, Gabe," responded Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "We've had such a bumper crop of chiggers that most of us are 'way behind with our scratching.'"—Kansas City Star.
